

Cracking down on SPAM with SmarterMail 5.x

Posted At : March 20, 2009 12:44 PM | Posted By : Ted

Related Categories: Stuff

A few months ago, I took on managing a couple other email domains for one of my personal clients. Since then, I've seen our SPAM levels rise. I have spent a little time tweaking spam restrictions for my domains off and on for a while, but recently I have started really cracking down.

If you are using SmarterMail, one thing you can do is add in content filtering. I've added in a domain wide filter based on domain names that, in my opinion, are spammers. The thing I love most about setting up the filter is that I can have the mail server send a bounce message back. I like this approach, because it should reduce the amount of this crap we get over time. That said, I've noticed that a number of these a-holes have a multiple domains and proceed to blindly send in a cycle day after day.

All that said, I'm compiling a list of suspected spam domains, and intend to make a file available with these for anyone that would like to use them. I've only been gathering these for about a week now, but here's my current list of offending domains:

```
aquaphorsolutes.com
carprodamerica.com
carprodusa.com
ganachetwos.info
gmtoffers.net
leveragedonline.com
myleaderobama.com
nesma.net.sa
ointproductions.info
ricknavalha.com
serviceslocks.info
shrunkonhunk.com
stillwatermountainq.com
truthsaturated.com
unitsettlement.net
viewhills.com
yourcreativenature.com
```